Washington, June 22 (AP)—Senator Pauling's suggestion that a re-

Dodd (D., Conn.) today struck back at Dr. Linus Pauling, who last night described him as a militarist.

The description was contained in a speech by the Nobel Prize-winning scientist at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore last night.

"My record is the best answer to this false charge," Senator Dodd said in a statement. "However, I do not intend to engage in an exchange of abuse with Dr. Pauling. . . . He believes that he is working for peace. I know I am working for peace.

Teller Mentioned

"But I am one of those who believe that our negotiations for disarmament and for a test ban must be based on effective inspection, and until we have that kind of agreement, American strength and firmness offer the only guarantee of a stable peace. . . ."

Senator Dodd also disputed Dr.

cent Dodd speech on "the fallacies of the nuclear test ban" probably was written by Dr. Edward Teller, a leading nuclear physicist who also came in for criticism by Dr. Pauling, a foe of testing.

"At the time I made my speech, I had never met Dr. Teller nor did he play any role in its preparation," Senator Dodd said.

"General Approval"

"As a matter of fact, when I finally did meet Dr. Teller some weeks later, he expressed general approval but mentioned two minor points on which he personally disagreed."

Dr. Pauling spoke in Baltimore only hours after he had refused to give the Senate Internal Security subcommittee — under Senator Dodd's acting chairmanship—the names of scientists who helped him gather signatures for petitions opposing nuclear tests.
